VOL. XXXX, No. 38

DIDSBURY, ALBERTA, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 28rd, 1943

P.F.A. Act

Reports covering 142 Alberta townships where the crop is estimated to be less than five bushels to the acre are being sent to Federal authorities by Provincial officials. It was learned in Edmonton recently. These notifications are made under the provisions of the Prairie Farmer Assistance Act, so that delay in making bonus payments under the act will be reduced to a minimum.

Townships reporting crop failure are said to be mainly in the south eastern part of the Province.

Assistance under the Act is granted on two conditions. First, if the average yield in 90 townships falls below five bushels per acre, due to causes other than hail. Crop Failure Year may be proclaimed. Farmers are then paid $2.50 per acre.

The second type of assistance is given when the yield in 90 townships is less than 12 bushels per acre and the average price of wheat during August, September and October is less than 50 cents. Farmers are then eligible for a variable bonus up to $2.00 per acre.

False Statement Costs $50.00

Joseph Libin, Calgary, landlord, was fined $50.00 or 40 days for making a false statement, with evident intention to mislead the War-time Prices and Trade Board.

Libin's mother-in-law gave a written statement to tenants in house of which he was landlord, that she wanted to live in the house. The house was duplexed, and when investigators from the Board interviewed, the accused stated that his mother-in-law was living there, which subsequently was false. Court action and the fine ensued.

For using certain types of springs in the manufacture of furniture, contrary to wartime regulations the Alberta Furniture Co. Ltd., was fined $25.

Heaviest fine imposed in Canada during the week was $5000, paid by a Montreal wholesale firm, found guilty of selling woollen cloth at excessive prices and failing to have the maximum price of cloth approved by the Board.

Canning sugar coupons will be valid until further notice, it has been announced by the ration administration. Wartime Prices and Trade Board. It was originally stated that the expiry date would be September 30.

Weddings

NEUFELD-GOOD

A very pretty wedding of wide interest was solemnized Tuesday, September 21, at three o'clock in the afternoon, in the M.B.C. Church at Bergen, when Miss Ermina Elsa Good, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Good, became the bride of Mr. Ernest David Neufeld, son of Mr. Cornelius Neufeld and the late Mrs. Neufeld, of the Jutland district.

The bride was very lovely in white sheer floor-length gown, waist length embroidered net veil with orange blossom coronet, carrying a bouquet of Sweetheart roses. She entered the church on the arm of her brother, Mr. Howard Good, who gave her in marriage.

The bridesmaid, Miss Marion Good, youngest sister of the bride, was dressed in pink sheer, and carried a sheaf of Sweet Peas. Little Aurora Brower, in pink tulle, and little Virgil Stauffer, in Lord Fauntleroy costume, acted as flower girl and page, carrying between them a basket of Sweet Peas. Mr. Neil Neufeld supported the groom.

Messrs. Abe and Dan Neufeld were ushers. Miss Gladys Eby played the wedding marches.

During the signing of the Register, Mr. Ian Stauffer sang, "Because".

The many friends of the Bergen district filled the church, thus expressing their interest in the young people. Behind the pulpit, two large hearts outlined with evergreen formed a pretty, decorative frontispiece. Lovely Gladiola and Sweet Peas, intermingled with houseplants, made a pretty setting for the nuptials.

The guests gathered in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Brower, sister of the bride, on the Carver place, where a sumptuous luncheon was served to some seventy friends. Mrs. Lloyd Stauffer, sister of the bride, acted as hostess to the guests.

The happy couple were the recipients of many lovely gifts, bespeaking to them the high esteem of their many friends. They are spending a brief honeymoon at Sylvan Lake.

United Church Notes.

Next Sunday, September 26, is "Rally Day" for our church. A special programme has been prepared for the Sunday School at 11 a.m. The theme for the worship service is "Giving our Best", and some of the pupils will take part. Parents are invited to attend this service.

Boundaries Set For Enlarged Municipal District

Proceedings have been instituted by the Provincial Department of Municipal Affairs leading to the establishment of an Enlarged Municipal District in this area, according to letters and maps that have been received by the various municipal councilors.

The councilors are asked to express their opinion in respect of the Enlarged Unit under consideration.

The proposed district will include the present municipal districts of Mountain View, Westerdale, Beaver Dam and Rosebud, together with three townships of Stauffer, immediately east of the boundary of Mountain View. The area will stretch from six miles north of Olds to five miles south of Crossfield, and from Sunnyslope on the east to Elkton on the west. The temporary name allotted to the district will be Dog Pound No. 280, and it will be one of the largest districts to be established up to the present.

It is proposed that the establishment of the Enlarged District will go into effect on January 1, 1944.

Presentation to Douglas Wordie

Last Sunday evening, at the close of the service, Mr. D. Parker presented Douglas Wordie with a Pen and Pencil Set from the Sunday School and Congregation, as an appreciation of his service to the Sunday School and the Church, on the occasion of his leaving town to attend the University of Alberta, at Edmonton.

The Rev. D. Whyte Smith also thanked Douglas for his valuable service to the church with his music, and congratulated him on winning the I.C.D.E. Scholarship for the Province, wishing him every success in his studies at the University.

Surprise Shower

A surprise shower was staged at the W. Falk home, Sunnyslope, last Thursday evening, when about twenty seven friends and relatives gathered, including a few Didsbury folk, to honor Miss Ellen Falk, who is to be married shortly.

It was the sound of the alarm that told her of the different hiding places of the gifts which, when all found, made a very lovely display. Miss Falk very kindly thanked one and all for their kindness, assuring them of a warm welcome to her new home.

A very dainty lunch was served, after which the guests returned home, extending best wishes to the bride-to-be.

NOTICE

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Didsbury School District No. 652, a resolution was passed to the effect that no new beginners will be admitted unless they are of the full age of six years on or before September 30, 1943.

The coal situation is anything but satisfactory. Local agents report a waiting list many pages long. Shipments coming in do not begin to fill the need.

For years we have wished somebody would chop down the cottonwood trees round our way. Fluff covers lawns and gardens, and seeps into our houses. The Local Improvement Board and those with empty coal bins, should take advantage of the opportunity.

We forgot to comment on the new cement sidewalk, on the north side of the drug store. What an improvement. We should have appealed to the Mayor, to leave his imprint there while it was wet, like the movie stars do. One man we know wanted a rolling put up one side, just in case.

Pat and Carol Leavens are home again, after spending practically all the summer vacation with their grandparents in Calgary.

Don't forget, the Superfluity Shop opens Saturday, October 2nd. Not this coming Saturday, but the one after. All proceeds to go to the Red Cross.

Heard that the dance at the Opera House, after the battle of the reserves, netted over $11.00 for the Prisoners of War Fund.

As the big toe said to the little toe, "Don't look now, but I think there's a heel following us."

Stook Sweeps

One hundred and fifty long wooden boxes, each containing over three hundred pounds of rods and metal, were shipped last week from the Standard Iron Works, Edmonton, to points in Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and British Columbia.

Labelled "Stook Sweep Kit No. 2", they are on their way to the harvest fields of Western Canada where they will help relieve the manpower shortage. The Stook Sweep was developed by the Department of Agriculture and the Provincial Marketing Board, and is said to do away with at least four bundle teams.

Kit No. 2 is an all-metal sweep fitting on the front of a tractor. Driven down the row of stooks, the bundles are picked up, transported to the threshing machine and dropped, while the tractor spins away for another load.

As you know, the labor problem is really acute; few threshing rigs can muster a full crew. But with increasing numbers the problem is less alarming... because of Stook Sweeps.

Fifth Victory Loan to Start October 18

The Fifth Victory Loan campaign is to start October 18th, with a minimum cash objective of $1,200,000,000, of which Alberta's quota is to be $37,000,000.

The objective of the fourth loan last spring was $1,100,000, and like all previous war loans, was over-subscribed.

Besides the cash objective of $1,200,000,000, holders of Dominion of Canada five per cent bonds and four per cent bonds due October 15, 1943, and called for payment at that date, will be given an opportunity to convert their holdings into Fifth Victory Loan bonds. These conversions will not be applied against national and cash objectives, since the $1,200,000,000 figure is for new money only.

Engagements

Mr. W. Falk, of Sunnyslope, announces the engagement of his eldest daughter, Ellen Dorothy, to Clarence Wall, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Wall, Didsbury. The wedding will take place in Sunnyslope, October 1st.

The World Of Tomorrow

THE URGENT NEEDS of a world at war tend to bring about great scientific, economic and social improvements which might take many years to develop under normal, peace-time conditions, and the effects of these changes on our daily lives and on the whole future of civilization may be greater than is generally realized at this time. It is not in the realm of prophecy to sketch the bold outlines of what our world may be like after the war, for they have already been traced. Developments which have taken place since the beginning of the war make the world as it was in 1939, antiquated from many viewpoints, and projects which would then have appeared fantastic are now being accomplished to meet the requirements of war. Because the majority of the new discoveries are used solely for military purposes at present, and because many are being kept secret from the enemy, it is possible to predict only a few of the many innovations which civilians will enjoy in the post war world.

New Plastics Are Versatile

More than a century was required to bring the crude rubber production of the world up to a million tons a year. The United Nations, chiefly Canada and the United States, are now planning to produce that quantity of synthetic rubber after only two years. In the realm of plastics, sensational developments have taken place since the beginning of the war. In the future the newest and most versatile of plastics will be available on a scale never dreamed of before. We are told that there will be glass which is unbreakable, glass which will float, and wood which will compete with structural metals. Hosiery, manufactured from air, water and coal, a wonder of the pre-war days, is only a forerunner of many new products from the same source, ranging from shoes which contain no leather and window screens which contain no wire, to machinery bearings which contain no metal. Fuels, metals, and plastics are now ready to finish the revolution in transportation started early in the century. Light, low priced cars will be manufactured with many of the mechanical improvements developed for wartime use, and it is predicted that they will travel many more miles to a gallon of fuel than the cars of the present day.

Housing To Be Much Improved

The war has driven home to us the need for wide-reaching changes in our present housing system. Lack of vision and initiative in home building is apparent in almost every Canadian community, where crowded and undesirable housing conditions have presented increasingly difficult problems. Engineers and scientists have been studying this situation, and already in some places on this continent pre-fabricated homes, made from the newest types of materials, including plastics, plywood, re-resistant wood, and synthetic finishes of lasting durability are being produced. It is said that stainless steel may be the roofing of the future and that lightning may be governed by electric "eyes" sensitive to outside variations in daylight, and that air conditioning will be improved in many ways. These new homes will be inexpensive according to present standards, and they will be movable. These are only a few of the material improvements which man may enjoy after the war, and many other inventions and discoveries, developed for use in combat, will be turned to peacetime uses in the world of tomorrow.

All-Bran Jammies

1½ cups sifted flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ cup sugar
1½ teaspoon salt

½ cup All-Bran
½ cup shortening
½ cup milk
½ cup raspberry jam

Sift flour, baking powder, sugar and salt together; add All-Bran. Cut in shortening until mixture is like coarse cornmeal. Add milk and mix just until dry and liquid ingredients are combined. Turn onto floured board, knead lightly a few seconds; roll into oblong about 12 x 7 inches and ½-inch thick. Spread jam over dough and roll like jelly roll beginning at long edge. Slice in about 1-inch slices and place cut side down on greased baking sheet or in large muffin pans. Bake in moderately hot oven (425 degrees F.) 18 to 20 minutes. Serve warm with thin cream.

SMILE AWHILE

"Your fiancé is a charming man. He has a certain something." "Yes, but I would rather he had something else."

Ethel—She's sorry enough that she married him, I'll wager.

Mabel—The idea! How can you say that? He thinks her a perfect angel, and treats her—

"As though she really were one. He doesn't buy her anything to wear."

A company director with a vacant expression sat in the dentist's chair. "I'm afraid we can't give him gas," said the dentist.

"Why?" asked his assistant.

"We shan't know when he's unconscious."

An inspector, while examining a class in school one day, asked, "Who drove the Israelites out of Egypt? You!" he said, pointing to a small boy in the corner.

"No, sir, 'twasn't me," replied the boy, trembling. "I only came back from the country last week."

Angry Resident—Didn't I tell you to come over and repair my door bell yesterday morning?

Mechanic—Yes, sir, I was over yesterday, sir.

Angry Resident—Then why didn't you go to work?

Mechanic—Well, sir, you see, I rang your door bell for ten minutes and got no answer, so I guessing you were all out.

Patient—I am troubled with alarming dreams. Last night I saw my deceased father.

Doctor—What did you eat before retiring?

Patient—Half a mince pie.

Doctor—Well, if you had eaten a whole pie, it is probable you would have seen your grandfather.

Johnny had been thinking and, turning to his dad, said: "What are our ancestors, daddy?" To which the father answered: "Well, son, I'm one of your ancestors, and your grandfather's another." "But why do people brag about them, daddy?" asked Johnny, innocently.

Mrs. Smith was on her first ocean voyage.

"What's that down there?" she asked of the captain.

"That's the steerage, madam," he replied.

"Really?" exclaimed the woman, in surprise; "and does it take all those people to make the boat go straight?"

Tommies who had been fed on dehydrated food from Canada wandered into a museum at El Alamein, where they saw some Egyptian mummies.

"Blimey," exclaimed one. "Dehydrated girls!"

Your Boys And Girls On Active Service

(By Ottawa Observer)

IT'S a little early yet to start getting the low-down on what the individual Army lads have been doing while sweating the Soviets over in Sicily or watching the jumping Japs vanishing from Kiska, but when the information starts to trickle out from official sources you'll hear about it and surely be proud of them. However, there's plenty of stuff coming in right now about your boys in the Air Force and the Navy and what a wonderful job they're doing, and those from the towns, villages and farms won't take a back seat to anyone. For instance, there's someone well-known up and down the British Columbia coastline, now Lt. Commander "Bill" Dalniece, who in the past two years has helped to send more than a hundred stranded or disabled ships back to sea, including a Nautilus boat which fell into British hands. His salvage experience is thought highly of in the Royal Canadian Navy. Lt. Commander Dalniece, N.E. Imagine, was just a farm boy, had no thought of war or heroics a couple of years ago yet here he is mentioned for grabbing a retreating tender that caught on the tide while retreating a plane over-seas. He drove the boat out of danger, came back to help the brigade fight the fire, without thought of personal risk to himself. The navy is going to take a pilot's course in this country to take a pilot's course in this country. Squadron Leader Vincent C. McDaniel, Contrevoie, N.E. Imagine, he was a navigator and wants to be a pilot now. But here's another angle, he's been awarded a bar to his D.F.C. The Navy girls, better known as "Wrens", have been given an increase in pay on both land and sea, and trades as of July 1st, and that means extra pay for cooks, laundresses and bakers. Thrilled and proud, the R.C.A.F. girls who recently landed in England to do their bit in the land they have heard so much about. They represented every province of the Dominion, including S.O. Alice Trotter of Little Canada, Ont., Josephine Paynter of Westbrook, B.C., and Corl. Evelyn Hornsby of Kamloops, B.C.

Royal Roads, the Canadian naval college on Vancouver Island is a magnificent estate, formerly owned by a Canadian coal baron, and is a grand place to train a few of the cadets recently selected for entrance were Thos. B. Herbert of Vernon, B.C., L. C. Mather of Toronto, Manitoba, L. D. Brammer of Wallaceburg, Ont., and R. J. Dickinson, Comox, B.C.

But he felt like being on a tractor over a stone field, did Sgt. Jim Gray of the R.C.A.F., who hails from the little town of Senate, Sask. Jim was on the 4th motorized bander piloted by P.O. Gordon Bennett of Winnipeg, which really got slugged while over the Ruhr, but which got back to its English base after eight incendiary bombs had hit it, and many lights, petrol gauges, electrical systems and hydraulics. Here's a funny one, Lieut. Johnnie Leaning, R.C.N.V.R., star of the British Empire games and Berlin Olympics, a survivor of the H.M.C. "Pill" of Crest, tripped on a brick during an air raid on London and sprained an ankle. Johnnie hails from Vancouver, but is well-known to sports fans all over Canada. Lt. William J. McKay, R.C.N.V.R., from Newberry, N.E., was the fellow who got plenty of praise when the R.C.N. was chasing launched picked up Greek survivors from a torpedoed ship. He got plenty of orchids in broken English, the story states. Strathroy, Ont., comes into our picture, when a home town Canadian navy man, Surgeon Lt. B. A. Campbell performed a successful appendectomy operation in the day cabin of a backing destroyer at sea, and also while the crew were at action stations because of a U-boat having been sighted. It took an hour and a half to do that operation, lots of nerve and cool judgment. But he wished he was back at the Strathroy hospital with trained nurses assisting.

There's plenty of heroism on our own home front, too, where our lads are concerned. Take for instance Flying Officer John Williams, R.C.A.F. of Port Dover, Ont. He acquired a valuable train load of gasoline that caught fire near Jarvis, Ont. He reported it quickly and returned with a party to save what might have been a disastrous catastrophe.

The United Nations can't help winning with spirit like this. At an Eastern Canadian port recently a crippled 13,000-ton Netherlands freighter pulled in with a hole in her bow that you could drive a train through. But on the stern was painted a Dutch boy and girl thumbing their noses at U-boats. In a squadron which were the fleeing Nazis heck over Sicily were such town and country lads as Plt. George Hill, D.F.C. and bar, of Pictou, N.S., Sgt. M. S. Zimmermann of Preston, Ont., P.O. Don Rogers of Amherstburg, Ont. Another leading squadron had Plt. Lieut. Johnny Johnstone of Selkirk, Man., and P.O. George Keith of Taber, Alberta. Canadian fliers now in action Alaska, the Aleutians, Labrador and Newfoundland will in future only have to serve in such theatres for six months, after which they will be posted to other active service combat duties.

The Navy's newest and best warship, the destroyer "Huron", went into service recently commanded by a native, coincidentally of Huron County, Ont., and none other than Lt. Cdr. H. R. Rayner, D.S.C., from Clinton, to be expanded. The navy reports indicate that fewer than ever are being rejected on medical grounds. During May, June and July, only 9.6 per cent. of those examined failed to meet the required standards. Defective vision caused most of the turn downs. This sounds interesting. Sky warriors on completion of four days of training will be entitled to wear on the left breast pocket new double gold wings, centered by an operational "O". That applies to all personnel outside of Canada. And that should end the first column of this new series of "Services" gossip.

"Comrades In Arms"

Moves To Sunday With New Show Over The C.B.C. National Network

A new half-hour, streamlined version of "Comrades in Arms", the weekly report to the nation by Canada's Navy, Army and Air Force, will be heard on the CBC national network each Sunday afternoon at 3:30 p.m. E.D.T., commencing September 5.

"Comrades in Arms" will continue to provide an up-to-the-minute picture of the three fighting services, and plans are underway to bring actuality broadcasts from the scene of battle as often as possible. The recent Battle of Sicily was "covered" by "Comrades in Arms" by means of overseas broadcasts, and plans to do likewise for the attack of Kiska fell through when it was discovered the Japs had abandoned the island.

The new Sunday time will give "Comrades in Arms" an even wider coverage. Within a week or two, a new mid-week programme will be announced to originate in Ottawa, and to feature spot news concerning the three services. Both "Comrades in Arms" and the new programme will be written by members of the three services and produced by the CBC.

Next meeting will be held on Wednesday, October 13, at the home of Mrs. Ed Craig, when a quilt will be put together, so please bring scissors again.

The World of Wheat
by H. G. L. StrangePossible Damage To Grain On Farms

Dr. B. N. Smallman, who is Canada's leading expert on the damage to grain caused by the greatly feared mites and other insects, has issued some suggestions to farmers on how best to protect grain which they will put into bins on their farms. Dr. Smallman's valuable suggestions are worthy of the widest publication. Here they are:

Because mites and other insects increase greatly from moisture in the grain —

1. Repair leaky roof to exclude rain and snow.
2. Have an air space underneath the floor of each bin.
3. If the bin has a concrete floor spread a layer of moisture-paper on it.
4. Clean granaries thoroughly before filling.
5. Brush the walls and sweep the floors with damp saw dust.
6. Sprinkle a little hydrated lime over the floor and sweep it about to fill all the cracks with the lime.
7. If the granary had insects last year cover the inside of the bin with whitewash containing one quarter of a pound of lysol per gallon of solution and let it dry thoroughly before filling with grain.
8. Allow an air space on the top of the wheat.
9. If grain is stored on the ground, place two or three feet of straw on the floor and cover the top of the pile with hay or sheaves, but remove these next spring.

ITEMS OF INTEREST IN THE WORLD OF FOODSTUFFS
Western Canada's 1943 wheat crop is officially estimated at 279 million bushels as compared with last year's harvest of 565 million bushels — Broomhall reports that while fair progress is being made with the harvest in Great Britain, yields are not quite the equal of last year's record results. Harvesting and threshing has been delayed by wet weather in the northern states of the U.S.A.

Russia has harvested over 5,000,000 acres of crops in southern districts and the North Caucasus, despite damage by war — General rains in the Argentine have improved wheat and linseed prospects — It has been announced that Australia will export 600,000 tons of flour to Britain within the next year.

Mountain View Notes

Mountain View W.I. held their September meeting at the home of Mrs. Joe Fulkert. President Mrs. Blain presided.

Members will meet at Mrs. Pearson's on Thursday, September 23, at the 2 comforters for the Red Cross. Two ditty bags were received and will be filled before the October meeting. Mrs. Pearson and Mrs. Fulkert donated the knitted articles for the ditty bags.

A supply of Christmas cards has been ordered and Mrs. M. Woods will have charge of their sale. Personal cards may also be ordered at a very moderate charge.

An Easy Way to Kill a Skunk

You may have named that midnight invader of the chicken coop Hilder or Hirohito, since they're all of the same stripe, but you can get rid of the odorous little Canadian skunk by a dash of strychnine in the eggs he sucks.

Roy Pugh, provincial apiculturist in Saskatchewan, gives this formula to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Make a small hole in the shell at one end of the egg, and into this stir with a stick or wire, enough strychnine to cover a small five cent piece. Leave the egg in the haunts of the skunk, but not where it can be found by larger livestock.

Babies May Have Extra Corn Syrup

Canada's bumper crop of babies comes in for special consideration of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. An exchange of sugar ration coupons in baby's ration book, for extra D coupons for corn syrup, may be made at the Local Ration Board.

For infants who need more than the 12 fluid ounces of corn syrup per D coupon as provided under the ration, the exchange will allow one sugar coupon for two D coupons. This will give a maximum of 48 fluid ounces of corn syrup per month in addition to the regular ration, to infants requiring corn syrup rather than the sugar formula.

More Children's Togs
To Appear

More children's clothing is to be manufactured, according to J. A. Klein, administrator of Women's Misses and Children's clothing, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, when the advertised trade meetings here this week.

Apparent shortages in clothing are due to excessive buying, said Mr. Klein, and such buying sprees are usually due to rumour. "Those who know don't talk, and those who talk don't know," said Mr. Klein.

Sir Arthur Travers Harris Is The Man Who Bears Responsibility For Directing Bomber Command

SIR Arthur Travers Harris is the man bearing the main responsibility for directing the R.A.F. Bomber Command. He directs the most vital punches deep into the solar plexus of the Axis, the ginger-mouthed decisive 51-year-old of whom a former flying colleague has said: "Of course we all love him. He's so bloody human."

In actual battle, he is a humanitarian. His feeling takes the form of telling the German people, as he did once, that he regretted that people had to lose their lives in R.A.F. bombing raids, but if they worked or lived in or near war factories they had to take that chance. And his relations with his three-year-old daughter are excellent. He is no boy-man to her. He is a father. So his inhumanity is not the same type he is fighting. It is in the complete absorption of his life in his job as commander-in-chief, Bomber Command. It is the telephone call he makes at two, three, four and five in the morning to operations rooms for reports on a raid in progress. It is in the fact that he never sleeps while an important operation is on, but also never misses arriving at his office at nine in the morning and working through until seven. It is in his devotion to punctuality, his supreme disgust in excess verbiage, his insistence that the record counts, not the man.

He holds strictly to that principle. Explaining it once, he said, "I have employed my worst enemies and sacked my best friends." He has. Harris is an Englishman, born in Cheltenham, April 13, 1892. The occasional error of calling him a South African comes from his emigration to Rhodesia directly from school to become, successively, a goldminer, a mail-coach driver, and a soldier. The military part came last, when he returned from a long mail trip late in August, 1914, and found that Britain had been at war for three weeks.

Young Harris tried to join the Rhodesian forces. He couldn't get in as anything but a bugler, so a bugler he became. He fought in the German South West Africa campaign as an infantryman, developed a firm dislike for using his feet, and in 1915 when his regiment was disbanded he returned to England to find something he could sit on and fight from at the same time. He didn't like horses. The Royal Flying Corps was the answer.

By April, 1918, he was a major. He fought in France, won the A.F.C. He commanded the home defence squadron that destroyed the first Zeppelin over Britain. He was given a permanent Royal Air Force commission in 1919, and his life since then has been one of disbanding his service to his country and his own beliefs, in that order. For instance, as commander of an R.A.F. bomber group in the early stages of this war, he didn't like it. It was a phoney war, to him. Fortunately his boredom didn't last long. His rise was too fast.

Harris was called Bert during his early days in the R.A.F. Why, no body seems to know. But to his closest friends he has been "Thors" and "Bomber Bert" since in early 1942 he launched air attacks using more than a thousand planes. His bombing program, with most of the tactics and planning his own—since he made him one of the most popular men in Britain, although little seen in public. He has time for interviews. For a new story on Harris, the best you can do is to listen to his infrequent speeches or interviews with friends.

The Air Chief Marshal may believe bombing alone could win the war. Once when discussing people who say it couldn't, he said, "I shall see." In 1942 after the 1000-bomber raids had started, he said, in a message telling what he had to be done to beat Germany, something that bears out that theme. "If I could send 1,000 bombers to Germany every night," he said, "it would end the war by autumn."

He has made a couple of visits to the United States—the first time to buy Hudson and Harvard trainers, the second time to arrange for a greater flow of fighting aircraft to Britain. He visited Ottawa before his last United States visit in July 1941, and was impressed in both places. On his return he reflected to a friend: "We can work like hell with the Americans."

Since that chance has come, he has watched American air operations almost as closely as his own. After the United States air forces bombed Germany for the first time, Harris sent them a message. It was congratulations, but prophecy too. It said: "Between us, we can bust Germany wide open." That aim, as the growing intensity of joint air raids on Europe testify, is being driven towards fulfillment.

Instead Of Thread

Machine Uses Radio-Frequency Current To Join Plastic Materials

Research engineers have developed an electronic "sewing" machine, expected to break bottlenecks in the sheet plastics industry.

Using radio-frequency current instead of the needles and thread, the machine joins plastic materials with a thin, solid seam that is air and water-tight, creating a bond that is stronger than the material itself.

Developed by C. N. Voyler and R. A. Bierwirth, under the direction of Dr. George H. Brown, research scientist of the Radio Corporation of America laboratories at Princeton, N.J., the machine is still in the development stage and has not been placed in production.

Instead of ordinary woven cloth, the machine works on thermoplastics and thermoplastic coated fabrics. They are the new synthetic materials used in the making of raincoats and caps, weather balloons and in the packaging of many types of food and oils.

The machine was demonstrated recently at the Camden plant of the R.C.A. It resembles in appearance and operation the conventional sewing machine.

A Contrast

How The World Has Changed In The Last 150 Years

What a small tight world it is in which Anthony Eden hopped from England to Quebec in probably less than 24 hours! What a loose, sprawling, disintegrated world it must have been in 1750 when it took General Wolfe 13 weeks of sailing to cover the same distance, on his way to rendezvous with Montcalm and destiny outside the walls of Quebec! Dying 50 years before the first steamship, 75 years before the first railroad, 150 years before the first airplane, General Wolfe, for all his brooding imagination, could scarcely have conceived a world shrunken to the dimensions of our airplane age and, as a result, the thing we call global war.—New York Times.

Canadian Women's Army Corps Is Making A Real And Vital Contribution To Our War Effort

THE novelty of seeing trim khaki-clad members of the Canadian Women's Army Corps going quietly about their tasks in the cities and small towns of Canada, is fast wearing off, for today, on the occasion of its second anniversary, the Corps is more than 12,000 strong and its members are on the job not only in Canada but in England and the United States.

These young women have flocked to the colors from every province—from the farms and settlements of the prairies, from Northern Ontario and Quebec, from offices, schools, factories and colleges. They are women from all walks of life, linked together in the common bond of service, and all proudly and smartly wearing the khaki of His Majesty's Canadian Army.

With the growth of the Corps, a new type of woman is emerging into Canadian life. Her spirit is a rebirth of the pioneer courage and incentive of women who stood by the side of their husbands in the battle for life and liberty. The work that young servicewomen are doing today is every bit as meritorious.

The Corps was born in August of 1941, when an Order-in-Council authorized the formation of the Canadian Women's Army Corps as a Corps whose role would be that of replacing soldiers in non-combatant duties.

First recruits for the new Corps reported on September 1, 1941. Companies were set up in the eleven military districts of Canada. Headquarters were established in Ottawa and Senior Commander Joan Kennedy of Victoria, B.C., was appointed highest ranking officer.

Today the Corps which has become an integral part of the Canadian Army has three high-ranking officers: Lieut.-Col. Joan Kennedy, who has charge of all training; Lieut.-Col. Margaret Eaton of Toronto, who has charge of administration and Lieut.-Col. Mary Dover of Calgary, who is commandant of the Basic Training Centre at Kitchener, Ont.

Those who struggled with the formation and organization of the Corps two years ago, may well look back with pride on their achievement. The Corps is progressive. As more and more active fronts are being opened, more and more women are needed to fill the less active, less glamorous jobs in support of the fighting troops.

The C.W.A.C. in its brief two years of existence has already passed many milestones.

Early in 1942, the first training centre was opened at Macdonald College, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Que. In June, the first cadet course was started, and each succeeding month has been the occasion of officers graduation exercises. Many of these officers are now soldier replacements in vital jobs.

In July of the same year, the Western Division Basic Training Centre was opened at Vermilion, Alta., and in October the largest group of C.W.A.C. to go to the United States left Ottawa for duty in Washington, D.C. In August, 1943, a large new barracks capable of housing 140 was opened in Washington.

Highlight of the year 1942 was the arrival overseas in November of the first group of Canadian Women's Army Corps personnel. The year 1942 also saw the establishment of an Eastern Basic Training Centre at Kitchener, Ont., with facilities for training 1,000 C.W.A.C. personnel a month.

The establishment of trades training courses and the opening of many new and varied trades such as telecord operators, armourers, projectionists, cipher clerks, instrument mechanics, spray painters and special technicians were all developments of 1942.

In July of 1943, the Corps received the welcome news that their pay was to be increased to 4-5 that of the men's rates. Trades pay and staff pay to be equal and certain dependents of Corps personnel were to be eligible for dependents' allowance at the same rate and under the same conditions as the men.

C.W.A.C. Barracks have been erected in all larger Canadian cities and in small towns where Army camps are stationed. Barracks are cozy with individual lockers containing two double-decker beds.

Thus the Corps marches on, young in years and experience, but hopeful and sincere in its endeavour to make a real and vital contribution to Canada and her part in the war.

You miss so much if you can't join in the fun of singing with your friends. Lots of get-togethers feature singing and if you don't sing, it isn't very much fun for you. You don't have to have a beautiful voice to be able to sing, because everyone can sing if they want to.

So many people are afraid to be heard because their voices are not exceptional. You don't have to be an opera singer to enjoy singing. Try it and find out!

Once you have lost your timidity of singing with others you will realize what enjoyment you have been missing.

Anyone who wants to sing can do so, provided, of course, that he really wants to, and has some musical sense, patience and a willingness to go slowly. Voice, in itself, is less important than a good singer has had nothing exceptional to offer in voice, but has trained it well.

This applies especially to the more serious singer. You, of course, may not want to try for the professional, but simply to develop your voice for your own enjoyment. Our 32-page booklet gives step-by-step exercises showing you how to use your voice and how to sing.

Railway Workers

Increasing Number Of Women Being Employed By The Canadian National

An increasing number of women are being employed by the Canadian National Railways in work previously regarded as the exclusive province of men. This is particularly true of the Motive Power and Car Equipment Department, as women are now making their appearance in company shops and roundhouses.

On the Western Region more than 20 women have taken over work formerly done by men and in nearly every case the women have taken over the position of a man who has joined the armed forces. In the mechanical department women are now installed at Regina, Saskatoon, Prince Rupert, Vancouver and Pacific.

Most of the women are at work as such cleaners, although at Prince Rupert one woman is recorded as baker, while at Pacific, on the line between Jasper and Prince Rupert, two women have the unique duty of engine watchmen.

In a report prepared for E. R. Battley, chief of motive power and car equipment, it is recorded that prior to the war 18 women were employed in the mechanical department. Now there are more than 200, varying out of duties previously handled by men.

Supervisory officials of the Canadian National Railways express satisfaction with the record of the women workers. One shop superintendent says: "These women have brought into the shop that additional bit of spirit and spirit which is the hall mark of the trained and tidy housekeeper."

Specific instructions have been issued that no woman worker is to be asked to undertake laborious tasks, and it is stressed that all assignments are given within the physical capabilities of these recruits who have come into the railway service to replace men enlisted in the active forces. — Canadian National Railways Press Service.

Beau Jonathan

by J. B. Ryan

CHAPTER I.

His grandfather's farm was only five miles beyond the village of Winnet and it was still early in the evening, but young Jonathan Hale knew that he would arrive home at the expected hour only at the cost of a thorough drenching. Already the black thunderheads rumbling in from the west had darkened the sky, and jagged lightning foretold that the gathering storm was about to break. The British spring was late in that year of 1875, but already it held promise of full measure in lashing rain and electrical fireworks.

Young Hale had no desire to acquire an unnecessary soaking. His voice and heel increased the pace of the roan gelding, not to get out of town, but to reach Knowles' Tavern as soon as possible. Like Jonathan and most of the people of Winnet, the innkeeper was a Puritan, who maintained an orderly establishment. Grandfather Hale would not object if Jonathan took shelter at the inn for the night, or so that the storm would probably hit.

The first drops of rain were spattering on Hale's cloak and wide-brimmed coed hat as he rode into the Knowles' courtyard. "Duck inside, Master Jonathan!" A grinning stableboy met the rider and reached for the slackened reins. "I'll be a deep gray; her skin, from brow to where her throat disappeared into a foam of lace, was a smooth white; her lips a rich, soft red.

Hale found his breath in a deep inhalation. She must be a great lady, this Mistress Jamieson—the daughter of some nobleman, one who moved freely in and out of the court of King Charles.

At once Hale realized that his almost rude stare had attracted the attention of the girl. The gray eyes turned in his direction and he dropped his gaze. Even with lowered head he was conscious of her glance; his cheek began to burn uncomfortably and he rose abruptly, catching up his hat and cloak. As he strode toward the door he was aware of his awkward length of limb, his great feet and large hands.

Rain and wind met him at the threshold, driving him back indoors. Jonathan returned to his table. "Master Knowles," he called, "bring me something to eat and prepare a room for me. It appears that this rain will continue indefinitely."

Though he started later, Jonathan finished his meal soon after did the occupants of the other table, since conversation and laughter engaged his neighbors as equally as bread and fowl. The graying girl, Jonathan could not help overhearing, be pouring bucketfuls in about a minute!" Knowles, the innkeeper, was shouting the windows against the storm when Hale entered the building. "Greetings, Jonathan," nodded Knowles, "you must be here at last. This is the first thunderstorm of the year."

"What right have you to put on airs with me, wench?"

THE rain was drumming against the stout walls and roof. Thunder boomed and the gloom of the public room was lessened by a whitish glare visible through the interstices of the casements. In that brief flash of illumination Jonathan saw that the room he had sought refuge from the unleashed elements. A man and two women were seated at the table nearest the unlighted fireplace.

The room brightened as Knowles applied the tapers to the successive candles. Once again the shadowy trio at the other table took on sharper outline. One woman was seated with her back to Jonathan, cutting off his view of the other girl, but the man was placed where young Hale could observe him without hindrance.

They were, it was obvious, people of quality. The man's garb velvet waist, satin breeches, silken hose and fine linens were a sharp contrast to Jonathan's dull homespun and leather. And the clothes of the two women—lace, jewels and more silks—no Puritan maid or matron in Winnet had ever seen, much less worn, such habiliments.

JONATHAN HALE had just returned from Southampton, a town of some consequence, but even in that populous seaport the young cabin had been alight and graceful, whereas Faith was—well, buxom, to put it mildly. Jonathan rubbed his eyes. He could have sworn that a sound, not unlike thunder, had broken into what must have been a dream.

It came again like a remembered echo, a dull reverberation that lifted Jonathan from his chair and sent him tiptoeing across the room. That sound had been the thumping of a fist against the panel of a door. Not his door, but the door of some other room of the inn.

Softly he unbarred the door. The hall was in darkness, but another door, situated diagonally beyond the intervening stairhead, opening at the same time allowed a yellow rectangle of light to fall on the floor.

THE light rested squarely upon a man whose height was accentuated by a plumed hat, a tall man booted and clothed in more elaborate than even Monsieur Denys.

There were other men in the hall,

Miscellaneous Shower

A very enjoyable evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Stauffer, on Tuesday, September 14th, when a large crowd of relatives and friends gathered to shower Miss Myrna Good, sister of Mrs. Lloyd Stauffer, and Mr. Ernie Neufeld, who are to be married shortly. At the appointed time, an alarm clock sounded from somewhere. The couple were told that they were to "follow time". They did, and soon returned with armloads of gifts. While busily engaged in unwrapping and displaying these, another alarm sounded. Thus it was, until all the gifts were found and opened. Many lovely and useful presents were received. They each expressed their thanks and appreciation for the kindness of their many friends.

A delightful lunch was served, and the guests departed with many good wishes to the happy couple.
